Banks/Credit Unions

What is the difference between a bank and a credit union? Both banks and credit unions have checking and savings accounts. They are similar in that you can go through a drive-thru to deposit money or use an ATM to access cash at either place. The main difference is that a bank is for-profit and is owned by stockholders and a credit union is non-profit and is owned by its members. Either one should be able to meet your needs - look for one that gives good service!
