2023 COMMENCEMENT

2023 Distinguished Minnesotan

TULEAH PALMER

A first-generation college graduate from Deer River, Tuleah Palmer earned a bachelor of arts degree in applied psychology from Bemidji State University in 2000. She has dedicated her career to providing social services, advancing racial equity and developing communities across northern Minnesota.

Palmer has served Minnesota as a provider of direct services and advocacy at the Domestic Abuse Intervention Project in Duluth, victim services coordinator for the Beltrami County Attorney's Office, executive director of the Boys and Girls Club of the Leech Lake Area, tribal planner and community development grant writer for the Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe and executive director of the Northwest Indian Community Development Center in Bemidji.

Since 2020, Palmer has overseen grantmaking, community leadership training, public policy initiatives and resource stewardship as president and CEO of the Blandin Foundation in Grand Rapids.

Palmer's skill in establishing and maintaining relationships with municipal, county, state and tribal governments, nonprofits and Minnesota state systems has helped her secure more than $100 million in state and federal grants for community-building projects over her career. Under her leadership, the organizations she has represented have received funding from the Minnesota state legislature more than a dozen times.

Palmer was named the state-wide recipient of the St. Paul & Minnesota Foundation's Facing Race Award in 2019. While at the helm of the Northwest Indian Community Development Center, she and the organization received the Bush Prize and a $500,000 grant to address homelessness in Bemidji, including housing for women returning from incarceration. Palmer was named to the Young Women's Initiative Executive Council in 2021.

She serves in a variety of advisory roles including the Legal Services Corporation's Rural Justice Task Force, the Governor's Council on Economic Expansion, the Governor's Workforce Development Council and Hubert Humphrey Institute of Public Policy's Future Services Institute.

ACADEMIC REGALIA

The academic regalia worn by university faculty, staff and graduating seniors at commencement exercises is a visual reminder of the ancient traditions associated with academe and higher education. The regalia gown, hood and hat is a modern adaptation of the habits and gowns worn by medieval monks and priests, founders of the university and collegiate practices in Europe and transplanted to the Americas.

The gowns worn at commencement, usually black in color, but allowing for a number of recognized and accepted exceptions representing certain schools' colors, are of three styles and reflect the three levels of academic degrees that universities and colleges grant. The bachelor's gown is characterized by moderately pointed sleeves, while the master's gown has full-length oblong sleeves, currently styled to hang down from the wrists. Neither gown has further decoration or distinguishing characteristics. The doctoral gown is tailored with full, bell-shaped sleeves, and is decorated with three velvet panels on each sleeve, manifesting the fact that the doctorate is a third achieved degree, and two velvet panels on either side of the front closure. These bars and panels are either black, or in the color of the given degree. All three types of gowns are, by current usage, worn closed in the front.

The three degree levels are represented in different hoods. The bachelor's hood is traditionally not worn by graduating seniors, but is worn by faculty and staff whose terminal degree is the baccalaureate. It is relatively short in length, hanging to about the middle of the wearer's back. The master's hood is moderate in length, while the doctoral hood is fuller and longer. The colors of the external velvet panels of the hoods represents the particular degree field. Those most commonly seen at the commencement exercises are dark blue for philosophy, light blue for education, purple for law, white for arts, and yellow for science. The internal colors of the hood, opened outward on the lower end, reflect the color or colors of the institution which granted the degree. For degrees granted by Bemidji State University, the internal colors of the hood are green and white. The bars and panels of the doctoral gowns may also reflect the color scheme.

Finally, the academic regalia is completed with the academic hat, which can be either of the traditional flat top variety, known as a mortarboard, or the tam variety. The doctoral degree is represented by the gold bullion tassel worn on the academic hat. At Bemidji State University, all other degrees are indicated by black tassels.

GRADUATING WITH HONORS

UNIVERSITY HONORS

Those graduating seniors whose academic accomplishments during their years at Bemidji State University are of outstanding quality are recognized at Commencement by being graduated with honors. The tradition of granting commencement honors dates from the practices common to the earliest colleges and universities of Europe in the 13th century. Three classes of such honors are customarily granted. The style Summa Cum Laude (the highest praise or distinction) is used to denote an overall grade point average of 3.90 or higher. For those students achieving an overall grade point average of 3.70 but less than 3.90, the style Magna Cum Laude (with great praise or distinction) designation is used. Cum Laude (with praise or distinction) designation denotes an overall grade point average of 3.50 but less than 3.70.

HONORS PROGRAM

Graduating seniors who are Scholars in the University Honors Program, and have completed the four-year Honors curriculum are distinguished at Commencement by gold senior stoles which are worn over the academic gown. These Honors Scholars are selected for participation in the program on the basis either of academic achievement in high school or after superior collegiate performance.
