DII NCAA Progress Towards Degree 101: The Basics

What is "Progress Towards Degree"?

Progress Towards Degree is a bylaw in the NCAA handbook that requires student-athletes to enroll and pass courses that fall into their degree program. The rationale behind this bylaw is to ensure student-athletes are maintaining progress toward graduation and taking courses that will aid them in ultimately achieving an undergraduate degree within five years.

What counts as "Progress Towards Degree"?

A student-athlete's first four full time semesters, virtually anything counts, with one particular exception. If a student needs to enroll in a developmental course (such as MATH 0800) then the course will only count if it is a prerequisite for a specific course acceptable for any degree program, it is given the same weight as others at BSU in determining full-time status, any noncredit courses may not exceed the maximum institutional limit, and may not count more than 12 hours and the course must be taken in the student-athlete's first academic year of collegiate enrollment, including summer. Beginning of a student-athlete's fifth semester, credits taken by the student-athlete must be towards their designated degree program. A student-athlete in their fifth semester and beyond is permitted to take: remaining liberal education requirements, courses within a student's major and minor.

The NCAA has specific restrictions on minor courses. If a student-athlete's degree program does not require a minor for the degree program, we can count up to six credit hours for the minor per term (or in the summer). If the degree program requires a minor for graduation, we can count an unlimited number of credit hours.

Degree Designation:

The student-athlete needs to have their major and minor declared and on their transcript before the first day of classes of the term for the compliance staff to count the credit hours for the term in which they are enrolling in. A student is permitted to be undecided their first two years of college but must officially declare their major starting their fifth semester of college.

What are the credit hour requirements for "Progress Towards Degree"?

In order for a student-athlete to compete, practice or receive an athletic based scholarship, the student athlete needs to be enrolled as a full-time student. During the regular academic year, a student athlete must complete a minimum of nine progress towards degree credit hours per regular academic semester in order to be eligible for the next academic semester. A student-athlete must also pass a minimum of 24 progress towards degree credit hours during the academic year, including the summer session, in order to be eligible for the next academic year where a minimum of 18 of the 24 progress towards degree credit hours must be earned in the fall and spring semesters.

What is the GPA requirement for “Progress Towards Degree”? The NCAA requires that Division II student-athletes earn a 2.0 minimum grade point average in order to meet satisfactory progress towards degree. The student-athlete must have a 2.0 GPA by the end of the academic year.

Repeating Courses:

The NCAA compliance staff can only count a course once if a student earns a proficient grade in that course. If a student either fails or withdraws from a course, the NCAA compliance staff would be able to count the course as progress towards degree as they did not earn a proficient grade previously.

Incomplete Grades:

The general rule of thumb with incomplete grades is that the course cannot count towards progress towards degree until a proficient grade has been posted.

Progress Towards Degree: What Counts?
First Two Years	Virtually anything*
Beginning Third Year	Remaining Liberal Ed. Requirements, Major and Minor Specific Courses

*Developmental/Remedial Courses can only be counted in a student-athlete’s first year of collegiate enrollment

If the student-athlete’s major requires a minor the student-athlete can take an unlimited amount. If the student-athlete’s major does not require a minor, the student-athlete can take up to six credits from their declared minor per term (or in the summer).

Progress Towards Degree: Credit Hour Breakdown
Per Academic Term (Fall/Spring)	9 credit hours
Per Regular Academic Year (Fall and Spring)	18 credit hours
Per Entire Academic Year (Fall, Spring & Summer)	24 credit hours

Tips:

- The general rule of thumb that we follow is that if the course falls onto the student-athletes DARS report, then the course will count as progress towards degree. However, it is possible for a course to over-satisfy in the liberal education requirements so it is important that any course that falls into a liberal education area is still counting towards the 42 lib ed requirements or the overall 120 hour requirement.
- In some cases, general elective courses can count towards progress degree. If a major and liberal education does not equal 120 credit hours required for graduation, we can count elective credit hours towards progress towards degree.
- If you have a student-athlete who wishes to withdraw from a course, please encourage the student-athlete to contact the compliance office.
